The diagram illustrates the components of the `font-family` CSS property. It shows two CSS rules. The first rule, `body { font-family: arial, verdana, sans-serif; }`, has two red arrows pointing from the label 'nama font' to the specific font names 'arial' and 'verdana', and another red arrow pointing from the label 'generic family' to the generic family name 'sans-serif'. The second rule, `p { font-family: "Times New Roman", serif; }`, has a red arrow pointing from the label 'generic family' to the generic family name 'serif'.

body {
    font-family: arial, verdana, sans-serif;

p {
    font-family: "Times New Roman", serif;
}
